

8. He who overpowered Krivi by his might and silenced Sushna Witt his weapons,—when he spread abroad yonder sky and propped it up, then first the dweller on earth was bom.

9. That wealth, which every A.rya here covets and every miserly Ddsa,—is sent direct to thee, the pious Husarna Paviru.

10. The zealous seers have sung a hymn, sweet with Soma and dropping ghi; wealth and manly strength have spread * themselves among us, and so too the expressed Soma drops,

IV.

To Indra; the risJii is ^yu.

10. As thou, Sakra, didst drink the effused Soma from Manu Vivasvat, as thou didst accept the hymn from Trita, so do thou gladden thyself with Ayii.

11. Thou didst enjoy, Indra, the effused drink with Prishadhra, Medhya, and Matariswan, just as thou didst drink the Soma with Dasasipra, Dasonya, Syumarasmi, and Rijunas.

12. [It is Indra]] who has appropriated the hymns for himself, who has bravely drunk the Soma,—for whom Vishnu strode the three steps according to the ordinances of Mitra.

13. O Satakratu, thou who art bountiful to him whose praises and oblations thou delightest in,—we, d.esiring wealth, invoke thee, as the milkers call a cow which bears abundant milk.

14. He who gives to us is our father, the mighty, the strong, he who acts as the sovereign, —may he, the strong rich Maghavan, give us kine and horses, even without our asking for it.
